

Faith in Ladybugs

You are the beautiful sunshine that naturally attracts precious little ladybugs.

— Marta Shumylo

We are ever in a state of creating our life as a natural out-picturing of our innate power. Often, we do this unknowingly or without much thought. Many chapters intend to make these hidden aspects more obvious and Faith in Ladybugs adds to the list.

Manifesting - putting our creative energy into action - occurs when we sustain our idea long enough to see it birthed. We manifest constantly through our conscious as well as our subconscious intent. Remember, intent is thought fueled by feelings and emotions. Intent builds our personal world - the things we have or don't have, the situations we walk through, and the relationships in our life - as we create moment by moment, projecting our energy that unfolds before us.

Knowing the mechanics of manifesting informs us of the how and why of all that has occurred or is presenting itself in our life. To understand this, we begin by examining where we invest our energy. In other words, where are our thoughts and emotions joined in perfect chorus? Are we singing the songs of woe, worry, strife, discouragement, and negativity, or are our melodies infused with love, forgiveness, abundance, understanding, respect, compassion, joy, and wisdom? Most likely, we operate with a combination of both extremes and with many degrees between as a collective whole. Regardless, where we place our focus and energy inextricably links to manifesting by our faith.
